A tax investigation could cost you money even if you've done nothing wrong.

HMRC FACTS

£33 Billion is the estimated tax gap between what HMRC should collect and what it does collect.

£17 Billion is attributed to Small Businesses (£14bn) and Individuals (£3bn).

Tax and VAT Investigations are a key tool in reducing this deficit.

HMRC use sophisticated software to cross match a wide range of data sources, any anomalies can lead to an investigation. They do of course continue to carry out random investigations.

ANYONE CAN BE SELECTED FOR AN INVESTIGATION

IMPACT ON YOU

Tax investigations are time consuming, stressful and costly.

Investigations can last for many months. During this time you could find yourself incurring accountancy fees as well as having to deal with costly business disruption and probing questions. Even if you're found to owe nothing you will still have to pay your professional representation fees.

REMOVE THE RISK, PROTECT YOURSELF

For a modest annual fee you can safeguard yourself from the cost of the professional fees associated with a tax investigation.
